PROJECT PIPELINE

is a summer camp program created by The National Organization of Minority Architects to educate minority youth about the process and impact of architecture in our communities. With camps held by chapters across the country, Project Pipeline provides youth with a unique opportunity for exposure to the excitement of design and planning.

Our summer camp offers a rigorous academic environment to explore career paths in architecture. We use fun and creative ways to engage students in the design process through drawing, model making, and group activities. Your child's critical thinking and problem solving skills will be nurtured in a focused and supportive studio environment where engaged curiosity can encourage future creative thinkers to consider a career in architecture, design and other STEAM fields.
